What is a Learning Map?
It is an educational tool developed by Root Learning in Perrysburg, OH. Learning Maps are an innovative and proven educational technology for adult learners. It is a group-based process where people explore information, share stories and draw their own conclusions. Learning Maps are a large, graphical story that contain six to seven key learning points. Pictured, is a group working through a Learning Map on the aerospace industry. I consistently saw people understand the complexities of the business within ninety minutes.

Do my daily choices impact peace?
The 80 Million People Project is an educational initiative using a learning map to explore this question. People all across the country will sit in small discussion groups exploring lifestyle, resource consumption and implications for increased tensions as resources become scarcer and concentrated in fewer hands. A preliminary map has been created.
